2 Witnesses At Odds on Navy Raids

s Senators Widen he 'Lavelle Probe'

By David E. Rosenbaum WASHINGTON, Sept. 29 (NYT).-A former Navy pilot told the Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday that fliers aboard his aircraft carrier off Victnam and been instructed in late 1971 and early 1972 to bomb targets in North Vietnam regardless of whether they were fired upon first. This would have been in violation of the rules of enagement at that time.

But annther pilot nn the same arrier told the committee that althungh bombing raids were planned days in advance, the bombs were not to be dropped if the planes were not attacked. Sen. John C. Stennis, D., Miss., the committee chairman, said a!ter yesterday's hearing that he "deeply concerned about several matters in this whole picture"-both the testimony yesterriay and the charges that Lt. Gen. Juhn D. Lavelle, since forced into retirement from the Air Force, had ordered more than 20 upauthorized raids over North Viet-

The first pilot to appear hcfore the committee was William Gregg Groepper, who resigned his lieutenant's commission and left the Navy this month, his four-year tour of duty having expired. A letter Mr. Groepper had written Sen, Stennis alleging nauthorized bombing attacks led > yesterday's hearing.

Briefing Sessions

According to Sen. Stennis and other members of the committee, Mr. Groepper said that pilots aboard the aircraft carrier Concliation were given closed-cirit television briefings before their raids. The raids were ostensibly reconnaissance missions with armed bombers accompanying the reconnaissance planes in case there was an enemy attack. Mr. Groepper was reported to have told the senators that the gist of the briefings before three different missions in December, 1971, and January, 1972, was that the bombers were to drop their bombs even if they did not draw

On two of these missions, over Quang Lang airfield in North Vietnam, the planes were attacked by surface-to-air missiles and enti-aircraft fire, and the hombs were unloaded. The third mis-slon was scrapped because of had weather.

The second man to testify yes-terday was Lt. Charles William Moore jr., a Naval Academy traduate who is currently stationed in Jacksonville Fla. According to the senators, Lt. Moore acknowledged that the television briefings often took place as much as two days before the missions were scheduled and that the possible bombing targets were described in detail.

Contrary Testimony Lt. Moore was said to have told the committee that intelligence officers told them to expect to draw enemy fire and to unload their bombs on the targets. But t. Moore giso said that the pilots ere tald not to drop their bomb cer North Vietnam if, in fact, ter were not fired upon.

The commanding officer of the nstellation, Capt. J. D. Ward, erviewed by telephone from an Diego yesterday, denied that there were any orders to drop bombs without first drawing enemy fire and said that Mr. Groepr must have been talking about briefings before reconnaissance flights. Capt. Ward added: "All missions were approved by

Rogers Sees New Mideast Peace Hopes

Says Recent Violence Is Minor Setback

NEW YORK, Sept. 29 (NYT).—Secretary of State William P. Rogers said last night that despite recent setbacks, "tha forces favoring a peaceful settlement" in the Middle East "still have the upper hand."

Mr. Rogers, addressing the 50th anniversary dinner of the Counoff on Foreign Relations here, said that, "at the time of the brutal assessinations in Munich, the climate for a settlement was improving. However, those killings have set off deplorable patterns of action and counteraction and have seriously clouded prospects of early progress."

Nevertheless, the secretary added, American diplomatic countects "with both sides" in the Middle East have "convinced" the administration that Israeli and Arab advocates of peace are still-

Mr. Rogers said that the administration was "determined to do all it can to bring about the negotiations between the parties which are the key to peace. With adversaries throughout the world now talking to each other, there is no good reason why differences in the Middle East should be an exception. Momentum toward a settlement must be regained," he said, "and we remain available tn play a helpful role."

Engagement Policy

In a wide-ranging review of administration foreign policy, the secretary said, "We are moving from a policy once characterized hy containment into a policy characterized by engagement." The hallmarks of the new policy, he said, were efforts to encourage all governments "to talk to each other," to create an international atmosphere "more open to the free flow of peoples and ideas and of goods end capital" and to "promote a reduction in reliance on force."

He said that President Nixon's proposals for ending the war in Southeast Asia "would hring a negotiated peace fair to both sides. I can assure you," he told the 1,000 dinner guests, we are pursuing negotiations seriously House 50 Years with that in mind."

The secretary also asserted the administration's determination to insure the adequacy of American military strength.

American policy, he said, is not one of military supremacy, but it is one of military sufficiency. It is that sufficiency that has made it possible for us to negotiate in confidence." said that "to weaken our defense posture now-to be forced to fall back to a reliance on nuclear weapons-will be a mistake of major proportions."

Border fighting has implee out between North Yemen and South Yemen with each side blaming the other for starting it.

The fighting came as an Arab League committee was preparing to visit the area early in a bid to settle disputes between the two Yemens, who have been waging a bitter verbal war for mouths on border issues.

In a statement issued here today, the South Yemen Embarry said regular North Yemeni-troops, backed b. Russian-built T-34 tanks and heavy artiflery and "mercenaries" crossed the border into South Yemen on Tuesday night.

Africa in the Assembly

It took a certain amount of courage to assail Ugande's policies in the UN General Assembly, as Sir Alec Douglas-Home did this week. To be sure, Sir Alec had an excellent case, but the African bloc bas a strong tendency to view global concerns from a very continental viewpoint. The bloc is by no means alone in this, but is, perhaps, lese sophisticeted in its means of stating its own

That the expulsion of the Asiane from Uganda was racial in concept and brutal in execution is plain enough. The Ugandan representative, naturally, put the matter on an economic basis, and said that the fact that those who fece emigration or internment were Asians was quite "coincidental." But the Ugandens seem to heve made no particular effort to decide which of the Asians owned how much of the country's wealth, or what they hed done to earn it. Rather. they preferred the simple method of distributing the wealth by removing the Asians. much as agrarian Communists distribute the land by killing the landowners. .

It is also interesting that Mr. Grace S. Ibingira, Uganda's representative, urged that this be considered a matter between Britain and Uganda, and stated that if the matter were placed on the agenda of the Assembly. "We shall take it that we are being bullied by a former imperial power into submission on a matter with which they are without right." But at the same time, five African statee and Guyana, which is a kind of Africa Asian descent are in control of the government) have joined to blame Britain for not doing more to remove the white government from Rhodesia. In other words, from the African point of view, the old colonial powers bave no rights in Africa, only responsibil-

If this should be considered a kind of cosmic justice for the sin of colonizing, it might heve some arguments in its favor, although here, too, there could be dispute over just what that sin really was, what the real condition of the black masses in Africa was before colonization and the precise balance of exploitation and improvement. But as a practical question for a world organization, neither Rhodesia nor Uganda can be approached in those terms.

The creation of an essentially black, viable, reasonably stable and increasingly prosperous Africa is not a radical dream. It is something that the Africans, and their global neighbors, must work to insure. The elements already exist over most of the continent, in the large number of states that have been created since World War II. 2s well as in the older nations that have persisted through many years.

But the task cannot be parceled out by skin color alone, or even by economic status alone. Some of the African states recognize this—just as some non-African states still refuse to accept it. But for the General Assembly, as a responsible body organized to provide a voice, and, one may still hope, a structure for a just world order, a color line, in exile (except when the local residents of no matter whom it may help or hinder, can-prisoners just returned by Hanoi illustrates nothing so much as the politically and morally ambiguous nature of the limited war the United States is fighting in Vietnam. In an "ordinary" war, prisoners would not be released until the end of hostilities, and their return would be arranged by the appropriate authorities. But in this undeclared, unconventional war, the prisoners have become a pawn, so used in the diplomacy and propaganda of both sides. Hanoi has used the prospect of their release to play on American public opinion in order to undercut the American terms for a settlement. The administration has played upon their continued detention to help explain its continued conduct of the war.

In this instance, Hanoi's motives for releasing three men-and specifically for releasing them to peace activists and for insisting that they no longer serve the American war effort -are not hard to guess. North Vietnam evidently hopes to strengthen the American anti-war movement, to encourage the Mc-Govern forces, and to induce the remaining prisoners to be similarly cooperative. Whether any of these purposes will be effectively served is open to question. For by finally deciding to let the three come home more or less in the manner of Hanol's choosing and by dropping its earlier hints of court-martial, the Nixon administration may have deprived North Vietnam of the confrontetion it probably counted on to score its points. The administration's relaxed attitude is good politics and good diplomacy

The three former POWs, in their Copenhagen press conference while en route to the United States, revealed the full delicacy

The controversy over the three American of their situation. They avoided overtly political statements. But, with the crnel condition of their still-imprisoned comrades foremost in mind, they declared that the only way to ensure their return is to end the war. On this everyone agrees. The argument comes on the terms. Explicitly, the three in Copenhagen did not endorse one set of terms or another; implicitly, they lent support to Hanol's. Some Americans may fault them for this. We would not: we would hope the administration would not. The ordeal of these men and the plight of prisoners still held in Indochina compel compassion, above all else.

> One cannot regard the release of the three without wondering what part the event may have in the hidden drama now being played out in the succession of secret talks between Henry Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho. At this stage of the war, at this stage of the secret talks, and at this stage of the American political campaign, it is hard to believe that this particular event can play any significant role at all. We do not profess to know whether the settlement rumors spurred by Mr. Kissinger's activity have to do more with the Republican campaign or with substantive diplomacy. It is indisputable, however, that no matter what political comfort some may think Hanol is affording to George McGovern by the prisoner release. Hanol is giving incomparably more political comfort to Richard Nixon by being a party to the latest diplomatic exchanges. At this point, it is enough to welcome home Major Elias and Lieutenants Charles and Gartley and to hope that the other prisoners and missing will be following them soon.

Scant Ulster Progress

The conference on the political future of Northern Ireland, beld this week in England, was badly handicapped from the ontset by the refusal of four of Ulster's eeven parties to participete. British minister William Whitelaw, who presided, insists that the sessions produced "a thoroughly constructive dialogue and exchange of views," but his task of devising even a modest step toward an Ulster solution appeare as difficult as

All that the three participating parties could agree on was the principle that Northern Ireiand should remain under British sovereignty unless a majority of its 1.5 million people decided otherwise, and the need for some kind of provincial assembly to replace the suspended Stormont perliament. There was no "give" in the positions of any of the participants on such crucial matters as the method of electing the Assembly, the makeup of the executive or cabinet and the control of security in the province.

Most discouraging was the fact that the Unionist party, which dominated Ulster for heif a century, called essentially for restoration of the same government setup that Britain suspended in March and that is wbolly unecceptable to most Cetholics. Former Prime Minister Brian Faulkner proposed a 100-member parliament, rather than the old 52-man Assembly; but his offer to share power by giving Catholics three parllamentary committee chairmanships was the identical proposal rejected by the minority last year.

Mr. Faulkner still opposes proportional representation in parliamentary electionsa system advocated even by many Protestants as fairer to the Cetholic minority. He insists that the cabinet-inevitably all-Protestant under his formula-select the committee chairmen rather than baving parliament elect them. In short, Mr. Faulkner evidently foresees business as of old at Stormont—a resumption of the Protestant domination and control that did so much to provoke the violence in Ulster in the first

Two ingredients imperetive for any viable solution in Northern Ireland are flexibility on the part of the Unionist party, still spokesman for most Protestants, and full participation in negotiations by the Social Democratic and Labor party, snokesman for most of the Cetholic community. With Mr. Faulkner maintaining a hard line in the conference just concluded and the SDLP boycotting it altogether, it is bard indeed to see any daylight ahead for Mr. Whitelaw.

WASHINGTON.—The Communist léaders in Hanoi keep on misjudging American public opinion. They seem to believe thez if they release three U.S. prisoners to anti-war end anti-Nixon propagandists, while holding on to the other prisoners, the American people will be impressed by their generosity and turn to George McGovern in the election as a way to end the war and bring all the American prisoners home

Even from the Communist point of view, this is undoubtedly wrong on several counts. First, the three released prisoners will not all egree to follow the Communist propaganda lines when they come home. Second, releasing a few prisoners to critics of the President and supporters of Sen. Mc-Govern is obviously an interference in the American election if not actually a form of blackmail, which hurts both McGovern and

It is true that the Communist leaders in Hanoi are doing what most governments do with prisoners of war. Trifling With Tragedy

To begin with, they seem to be trifling with the sorrow and tragedy of the families of the prisoners left behind. Also, they assume that releasing a few prisoners to anti-war American activists and holding the rest will help their cause, put pressure on the President to settle the war on their terms, and promote Mc-Govern's election in November.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The American prisoners in Hanol could influence the peace terms and maybe even the American election, but only if Hanoi released them all, not to

The American Sphinx

By Joseph Kraft

SAN FRANCISCO.—Anyhody trying to read the riddle of the sphinx that is American publie opinion this year should cast an eye over the ballot here in California. Apart from the names of the candidates, it includes a series of highly revealing proposals, or initiatives, thrown up for public decision by petition of the citizenry.

Those initiatives show that the country, or at least Californie, is spinning its wheels politically as rarely before. Dissatisfaction with present leaders has caused well-meaning people to strike out in ways that are almost certainly self-defeating.

The initiatives are a particularly good guide to the American sphinx because they are not easy to get on the ballot. More than 5 percent of the number of votes cast for governor in the last elec-tion, that is, over 325,000 signatures, are required.

10 Initiatives

In the early postwar years, highly publicized and well-fidrives used to put quite a few initiatives up to public vote. There were 10 initiatives on the ballot back in 1948. But sophistication about publicized drives has been develop-ing. The number of initialives able to get the required number of signatures has been declining apace. There were four in 1964. two in 1985, one in 1988 and none in 1970. This year, in sharp contrast there are nine initia-tives on the ballot.

All nine, in further contrast with the past, were brought to public attention by small ginger groups working without benefit of highly financed public relations operations. A tiny activist group of young people calling themselves California Marijuana Initiative, for example, was able to get on the ballot a proposal removing criminal penalties against adults using or growing Another striking feature of the Liberty to make room for a high rise can factory. initiatives this year is the wide range, not to say crasy mix, of grievances. One initiative would JEROME ZERTE severely limit property taxes. Another would reinstitute the death penalty. A third, which seems to have aroused curiously little attention, would ban all busing for racial purposes. A fourth would impose tighter controls on obscenity. A fifth would make illegal some of the tactics practiced by Cesar Chavez to organize agricultural workers. A sixth would assert tight ecological control over the California coastline, including ell port faci-Leaders able to reconcile such divergent drives are probably yet unborn, and one is tempted to feel sympethy for officials subjected to such contrary pressures. But in most cases, the spur to initiative has been inactivity by federal, state and local officials. Everybody here agrees that something bas to be done about property taxes. Still, nothing was done. So an interested group pushed the issue as an initiative and found a very strong response.

The same goes for the initiative protecting coastal waters.

A particularly nice example is the case of marijuana. The best estimates are that one-third of the California population smokes pot But under California law, smoking pot can be treated as a felony subject to penalties of up to five years in prison.

There is widespread belief that this anomaly should be correct-ed by etatute. But since President Nixon end Gov. Ronal Reagan beve been runnin egainst drug uscrs, mere stat legislators are understandably re luctant to get into somelining the could hurt them politically. Hence the outmoded and absurd la has been kept on the books leas ing the field open for live tin group that put forward the peti tion for reform.

Big Question

One big question remains. Apar; from shooting off steem, with good do these initiatives and complish? Nobody can be sure and once again the marijuant initiative is a good case in point It will almost certainly be defeated, and a recent poil by Merch Field shows it going down nearly 2 to 1.

But backers of the initiative argue that debate will have ar educative effect, sure to achieve reform in a couple of years. To many persons, including me, the opposite seems more likely. My feeling is that defeat of the initiative will only fortily opposition in the legislature. False exand there will have been sharp-ened the kind of ideological issue that impairs the solution of problems. Indeed, it is in just these circumstances, when confusion and disappointment are rifs, that the sphinx goes for the likes of Gov. Reagan and President Nixon

Gen. The Binh Xuen faction also controlled gambling houses and prostitution in the Saigon area.

A Memorable But Truncated 'Norma'

By David Stevens

DARIS, Sept. 29 (IHT),-The Paris Opera opened its season ast night with a coup de théatre hat the management would just is soon forget, and with some unging that will not soon be fortotten by those who heard itrom Montserrat Caballe and Flornza Cossotto-in a brusquely runcated revival of Bellini's

The first-night audience had ust seated itself for the fourth and last act with the glorious inging of the famous third-act luct by these two ladies still ringng in its cars, and was told theperformance could not continue ecause the tenor. Bernabe Marti in real life the husband of Miss .aball@ could not continue in the ole of Politone.

Now "Norma" is an opera nooriously subject to such mishances, due to the difficulty of he title role. On one memorable ceasion, an indisposition of Maria allas sent the president of Italy ome after the first set oo openag night in Rome (Cultural Miniter Jacques Duhamel was the ighest-ranking official discom-'noded last night', and even the aris Opéra had to half a Callas. erformance in midstream for the same resson a few seasons

But the role of Pollione, nominally a principal one, is in fact of secondary importance, and as one critic reminded the Opera today, "the streets are full" of tenors who can sing it. Opera houses of the rank to which the Paris Opera newly aspires cover even difficult roles with singers ready to step in. Marti's ailment was real enough, it seems, and thus doubtless not without advance warning, yet no one was on hand to take over for the final act. Well organized houses make some superhuman efforts in such circumstances-one remembers a performance of Tristan und Isolde" at the much-maligned Met that required the services of three different Tristans to com-

That said, it remains to be added that the three-quarters of "Norma" that was heard was worthy of an opening night. Miss Caballe is not only equal to the title role's technical demands, but she is extraordinarily sensitive to the words she sings, as her enunciation, phrasing and tonal coloring prove. She had some roogh moments, those of Norma's anger and overwrought emotional state, hut they were passing incidents in a masterful interpretation.

Beautiful Blend

Miss Cossetto was at least her peer as Adalgua. In the great "Mira, o Norma" duet, she fined her naturally rich mezzo down to blend beautifully with Caballe's soprano, and their teamwork in the cabaletta was exciting, and was rewarded with an extended ovation for what, also, proved to the excitement that one might be the end of the evening.

Franco Zeffirelli's sets, created for the Callas performances in the mid-1960s, are rich in romantic atmosphere that relates more to the era of the opera than to any misguided attempt at historical accuracy, and his staging-recreated here by Luciano Barbieriwas full of sensible and sensitive

Oliviero de Fabritiis's knowing direction, was in good form, and the flute and cello soloists distinguished themselves in seconding the singers, while the recently reorganized chartis reinforced the good impression made at the end expect from such a production. The audience was in splendid voice. A concentrated claque in the upper reaches of the bouse greeted Miss Cossotto with vociferous enthusiasm before she had opened her mouth, while other ections of the audience-with characterístic Parisian rudeness and no doubt applying standards learned elsewhere—heaped abuse on the hapless Mr. Marti, who was managing quite scceptably, although somewhat constricted in tone and wooden in comportment.

In the general hoo-ha, Ivo Vinco's gruff but forceful imper-sonation of the bellicose Druid high priest, Oroveso, was somelost, especially since his final act reappearance was wiped out. He is, incidentally, the husband of Miss Cossotto. It was family night on stage.

The Opera announced today that ticket-buyers for this illfated performance can get seats for Oct. 26 in recompense (up to Oct, 8 at the box office), and that the succeeding nine performances during October will be performed with the Italian tenor Pier Miran-

The Opera's directors do seem to have instituted a couple of useful innovations. The performance almost started on time, despite a number of unseated patrons, and the program contained an extensive synopsis of Strauss's "Die Fran ohne Schatten," the next production, which will give its potential audience a chance to bone up on an unfamiliar opera

LONDON THEATER

The Unreal World of Noel Coward

By John Walker

LONDON, Sept. 29 (IHT).-Of all high comedy writers, Noel Coward is the furthest removed from reality. He does not create a world of his own but isolates his characters from the mundane, His heroes and heroines exist in a vacuum, abhoring all natures but their own. Never more so than in "Private Lives," first produced in 1930 and now brilliantly revived at the Queen's Theatre with Maggie Smith and Robert Stephens as the embattled lovers, Amanda and Elyot.

The situation is an artificial one: Amanda and Elyot, divorced and remarried, discover themselves in adjoining hotel rooms on the first night of their honeymoons, discard their new partners, and decamp to Amanda's conveniently situated flat. The unreality is heightened by Sir Noel's artifice of a cumpingly symmetrical construction, en phasized by John Gielgud's delicate direction.

The counte's isolation is conveyed by the suggestion of a second proscenium arch that frames Anthony Powell's sets, nicely hideous evocations of Odeon-style architecture. In the first act, the balconies on which Amanda and Elyot rediscover their passion for each other, do not appear to be connected to anything. They are as self-contained as Amanda's flat, which has doors that open on to nothing definite.

The only person in the play who has any connection with a recognizable world is Louise, the maid, and she speaks French which no one attempts to understand, even in the moments when they are not ignoring her.

Amanda and Elyot, who by any reasonable standards behave disgracefully, succeed not because they are better than their new sartners, Victor (James Villiers) and Sibyl (Polly Adams), but because they are superior-in wit, in style, "jagged with sophistication as someone says. Victor and Sibyl stop being bores only when they rise to the level of insult and recrimination of that ends the play. Amanda, in Maggie Smith's virtuouso display, dominates the action through her isolation from herself. Miss Smith, indeed, is twice removed from Amanda. You are consciou. of her as an actress-and a superb one-using flashing eyes, pouting mouth and swooping voice with impeccable comic timing to create the essential artifice of Amanda, who is able to regard herself objectively, as from a distance, even though she is often amazed by her own behavior.

Amanda and Elyot in the hilari- a stinging butterfly and more a ous breakfast-time confrontation

Robert Stephens's performance is as calculated, but in a different manner since he is determined to offer something as different from an imitation-Coward as possible. He underplays-and understates, avoiding clipped speech as much as is possible with the short, sharp lines. He largely succeeds, even if sometimes dimmed by Miss Smith's flamboyance. His Elyot is less deeply frivolous man.

Sir Noel's writing easily maintains a scintillating level of wit. apart from some moments in the second act when the writing flags under the immense difficulties of sustaining a virtually two-character play on nothing but talk.

On Sunday, the Portable Theatre presents "England's Ireland" for two performances at the Royal Court. The play, written in collaboration by A.M. Bicat, Howard Brenton, Brian Clark, David Edgar, Francis Fuchs, David Hare and Snoo Wilson, aims to view the present troubles in Ireland in the context of their significance in the United Kingdom as

ART MARKET: New York's Growing Influence

By Souren Melikian

JEW YORK, Sept. 29 (IRT).-With the auction season just eginning in Europe and Amera attention is focused on the rowing importance of Sothebyarke-Bernet in New York. The Manhattan branch of the -, ondon firm had a turnover last a higher quality. One of Parke-Bernet's specialties seems to be the wholesale disposal of estates. Last season, among the better-known collections were those of the late Jessie Donahue, the Woolworth heiress, and of Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, widow of the late financier. Such sales benefit from the prestige and glamour aurrounding the former owners and on the whole have been remarkably successful.

Greater Appeal

Of even greater appeal to col-Peters and, therefore, to dealers calering to their needs are the sales of works of art belonging to museums and foundations. The collections of the Cranbrook Academy of Art and the Solomon R. Guggenheim foundation last season attracted vast crowds. Because the quality of such collecorder, world records are often broken in every category. At the Cranbrook sale in May. the finest blue figure of a sphinx ever produced by an Egyptian craftsman rose to $260,000. This is the highest price ever paid for an Egyptian objet d'art; it is also the highest bid for any smallscale piece made in antiquity. Re-fore the sale, such a price would have appeared improbable. Equally extraordinary was the reason. The calendar for the sudden interest in the Swiss sculptor of the thirties, Edouard Marcel Sandoz, From an estimated price of $1,000, a carving "Sitting Condor" rose to $7,750. In New York, this is not so.

Martin Stansfeld of Chark, Nelson, a market analyst for Parke-Bernet with long experience at Sotheby's, London, said that Parke-Bernet sales were, on the contrary, characterized by the presence of many private buyers. According to him. "Americans like to do things for themselves and are far less inclined to take professional advice if they like an object." Their sudden fits of enthusiasm will result in unpredictably high prices. Extremes aside, certain categories of art do better in New York than in London, Americana is an obvious case. Prices in this category have been soaring since October, 1971, when a picture by Charles Russell, "Death of a Gambler," dated 1904, sold for $100,000, Last May, "Gray and the Brass" by John Sloan, dated 1907, fetched $52,500. Modern sculpture is another category that does better in the United States. This is partly because this sort of art has long been integrated into the decoration of private houses.

The result is that Sotheby's in London can call on Parke-Bernet to dispose of items that have betprospects in America than in Europe, Conversely, Parke-Bernet, sends works from categories that find little favor among Americans for sale in England. Such a category is old masters, traditionally not very popular on the American market.

Since 1970 European dealers have been taking a more active part in New York sales. This has long been true of European furniture dealers. In recent years many of the best furniture buys have been made in the United States. But picture dealers are becoming more and more interested in New York. When the Guggenheim Foundation put up a number of Kandinskys, the majority were bought by European dealers, Long considered an auction house for millionaires, Parke-Bernet has recently developed a sideline in "ordinary" auctions at PB-84, which opened in New York in 1968, On Wednesdays at 10:30 a.m., PR-84 holds sales of the catch-all kind to be seen at the Hotel Drouot in Paris. The main difference is that, at Drouot, there are fewer "good" objects-that is, works of quality that have escaped the notice of experts or auctioncers.

The reason underlying the creation of PB-84 was Parke-Bernet's need for an outlet for lesser objects from estates-not just the great Renoirs and rare commodes by B.V.R.B., but also the odd kitchen table and the 1880 painting. These now go to PB-84.
According to Martin Stansfeld, the American auction market has recovered from the 1970 recession and, since last December, has been gradually improving. Among the forthcoming sales, the "American Week" will provide a test of the American mood. Of specific American interest, the auctions will reflect the present frame of mind of American buyers.

Japan Widens Its Payments Gap in Month

But Surplus Declines Over 12-Month Period

TOKYO, Sept. 29 (AP-DJ) .-Japan had a balance of payments surplus of $557 million in August, up from a $402-million net inflow in July, but down from a $3.3-billion surplus a year earlier the month in which the yen was floated, final figures released today by the Finance Ministry

The final results were little changed from provisional totals for August announced in mid-

The August results gave Japan a enmulative balance of payments surplus of $2.35 billion in the first eight months of 1972, sharply lower than the year-earlier total of $6.69 billion.

One reason for the large decline is the substantial amount of capital that has been leaving Japan this year. The long-term capital account for the first eight months of 1972 recorded a deficit of $2.36 billion, compared with a deficit of $234 million in the first eight months of 1971.

At the heart of the balance of payments figures lie the merchandise trade and invisible trade accounts, which measure most accurately the power of a country to earn foreign exchange, and which are regarded as a key measure of the strength of a nation's currency.

These figures show that Japan is still a very large net seller of goods and services in world markets, indicating the yen remains a very "hard" currency.

Japan's trade balance for the first eight months ran up a sur-plus of $5.4 billion, compared with a surplus of $4.4 billion a year earlier. When Japan's transfer payments and net outlays for services, such as ship-ping charges and insurance, are subtracted from this, the resulting current-account payments surplus totals $3.57 billion in January-August 1972, up from $2.12 billion a year earlier. The Finance Ministry attributed the jump in the Aug. surplus compared with that of July to a sharp decline in payments to foreign shipowners for vessels chartered during the recent Japanese seamen's strike. That walkout ended in mid-July.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

European Tire Firms May Group

A new European tire group linking major French, West German and Austrian manufacturers is expected to be announced soon, the financial newspaper Les Echos reports. Involved are Michelin and Kleber-Colombes, of France; Continental Gummi and Phoenix Gummi, of West Germany; and Semperit, of Austria. Michelin, one of the world's largest tire makers, is "behind the scenes and pulling the strings," Les Echos says. The newspaper said the move is designed to counter and further check European penetration by U.S. tire makers and counter difficulties met by Michelin in the United States. If negotiations are successful, the new associa-tion will be as large as the Dunlop-Pirelli group in terms of turnover, but it will control about 50 percent of the European tire market, as against 30 percent for Dunlop-Pirelli.

Franco-German Computer Link Seen AEG-Telefunken, of West Germany, and France's Thomson-Brandt group are expected to agree to link their computer components business by the end of the year, informed industry sources say. The British Plessey company, which held talks with both firms earlier this year, is unlikely to take part in the agreement, the sources add. The three firms had discussed establishment of a four-member group with either Motorols or Texas Instruments, of the United States. The talks ran aground over the 25 percent participation sought by each of the U.S. firms, the sources say.

It is expected to be owned 25 percent by the Japanese trading company, officials say. Mitsul officials say Anglo Chemical and Derby plan to drop their individual memberships in the London Metal Ex-

Coca-Cola (Japan) Is Top Earner

The Tax Administration Agency says Coca-Cola (Japan) was the top earner among 164 large corporations which closed their half-year business term on June 30. Coca-Cola's before-tax profit totalled 10.3 billion yen. This was followed by Asahi Glass with 8.4 billion yen and Nippon Denso with 7.49 hillion yen. Bridgestone Tire, which was the foremost earner for the previous term to Dec. 31, 1971, fell to fourth place. The agency's tabulation covered 164 leading corporations whose capital exceeds 100 million yen. It took two interventions by the government, which was concerned over the possibility of the financial control of some key industries falling into the foreign hands of Paris-based Parihas, to get the two sides to agree. Prime Minister Gaston Eyskens and two of his ministers met with the principals Wednesday night and again this morning.

The battle lasted about a week.
It pitted the Paribas group against the international Rothschild interests, with which Lambert is linked, and the De Launoit family that had long controlled Cofiningus and Brutina. Cie. Lambert, led by the dynamic Baron Lambert, has long

Money Supply Pace Slows, Fed Reports

The same was also true of the monetary base, another key total whose movements largely determine the future course of the money supply—which in turn has a key influence on overall economic activity.

The growth rates-12 percent for available reserves, 4.5 percent for the monetary base, and 7-5 percent for the money supplywere somewhat higher than many economists believe is desirable in view of the current rapid pace

COUNTRY ...

If you have saved or acquired $5,000 to $50,000 in cash or securities, you naturally want to make your capital grow. Yet you may feel you are actually losing ground due to inflation

To help solve this problem, clients in 64 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management, a tested plan originally developed by a Boston family to manage its own common stock investments.

The plan thus far has proved, we believe, especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios starting with from $5,000 to $50,000 — though, as in any selection of investments, losses do and will occur.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 15-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. v.39.

MARY TODD LINCOLN

Her Life and Letters Edited by Justin G. Turner and Linda Levitt Turner. Alfred A. Knopf. 750 pp. $15.

Reviewed by T. Harry Williams for one reason or another disliked her: Many who never saw her gathered an unfavorable impression by reading about her. She was, in modern parlance, the vic-tim of a bad press. The con-temporary harsh appraisal of Mary Lancoln has come down as the verdict of history. As the editors Justin G. Turner and Linda Levitt Turner remark in this massive compilation of her letters, a nation that has erected monuments to her husband "pre-fers not to think of her, but when it does dismisses her as a shrew, a spendimit, a mad-woman."

The justice of the verdict and the reasons for it are the theme of the Turners book. They have assembled her approximately 600 surviving letters, more than half of them not previously published or not published in their entirety, and connected them with a running commentary. The resulting account provides a some what fuller story of Mr. Lincoln than the biography by the late Ruth Painter Randall, but the real contribution of the book is the letters. They afford countless insights into the life of the period . and will be a priceless source for historians.

The young Mary Todd revealed many of the characteristics of the later woman. She was witty, clever, often too frank, and she had a passion for nice clother and would get them, as one ob-server noted, "at all hazards." She knew that she was clever, but knew too that in her day the only career for even an unusual woman was matrimony. She. was determined to marry well but also for love. "My hand will never be given, where my heart is not," she confided to a friend.

Leaving her home in Lexington, Ky, to visit relatives in the raw new capital of littnois, Springfield, she met Abraham Lincoln and gave her heart to him immediately, as he gave his to her. Perhaps one reason for the fascination was that both were drawn to politics. Her in-terest in it was thought by some to be improper, or as she ad-mitted, "unladylike"

During the 1840s and 1850s the Lincolns enjoyed a fairly happy and serene life. Mary was proud of her husband's increas-ing prominence in his law practice, and in politics. They purchased a house, and as his income rose she was able to indulge her taste for expensive clothes. The only cloud in this period was the death of their second son, Eddy, She was "doomed before she set foot in Washington," the editors write. Determined to help her husband and to shine in her own right, she did too many things wrong and too many things a woman, even a rresuem s.wie, was not supposed to do. She lobbled to get certain men appointed to jobs or to keep other, men from getting them and she presumed to advise Lincoln on hour to amount the way. All this how to conduct the war. All this became known to her detriment. It was not known that she also interested herself in securing positions for the lowly, including a mumber of former slaves.

SURELY no President's wife 7 What the public noticed most collected as many enemies as about her was her expenditure of Mary Todd Lincoln. Most persons money, some of it not her own. who came in contact with her She overspent a congressional appropriation of $20,000 to redo the White House by $6,700, buying many needless and costly items. She went on lavish shopping sprees in New York and bought the latest and most expensive clothes. Her increasing hoard of goods was enlarged still more by gifts from persons who hoped to secure favors from Idncoln and that she saw no impropriety in accepting-bonnets,

This seeking of material possessions was perhaps a groping for security, and a reflection of a growing mental instability. She suffered a breakdown after the death of her third son, Willie, and took to attending seances in the hope of reaching him in the other world. Now she had only her husband, her oldest son, Robert and the child son, Taddy. She became increasingly dependent or Lincoln, who, because of the pressures of his position, had less and less time for her. Then in April, 1885, she saw Lincoln assassinated before her eyes. She went over another brink.

She departed Washington un-She departed Washington unnoticed and went to Chicago, declaring she could not return to the house in Springfield. In Chicago she took rooms in a "genteel" but cheap hotel. Her problem now and for many years would be money, to pay off her debts and to live as she thought the widow of Lincoln should live. Lincoln had left a sizable estate but no will, and pending settlement she had to subsist on the interest from her share, a mere $1,500 a year or so. She demanded of Congress that it grant to her Lincoln's salary for the four years of his second term, $100,000, but the legislators gave her only one year's salary, $25,000 less taxes. ...

She began a long struggle to force Congress to vote her a pen-sion, writing to every influential man she had known and employing a lobbyist, who was also sup-posed to get her debts scaled down. CHer letters to this man are among the saddest parts of the book. Eventually, with Rob-ert's help, she retired the debts.) Not until 1870 did she win her pension, $3,000 a year, later in-creased to $5,000. This, with her share of the estate when it was settled, enabled her to live as she wished. She traveled in Europe and resumed her buying of clothes. Her son, Robert, fear-ing she would dissipate her prop-erty, had her committed for insanity, another blow to her stability. She shortly won release and continued her wanderings. She died in 1882 and was at last

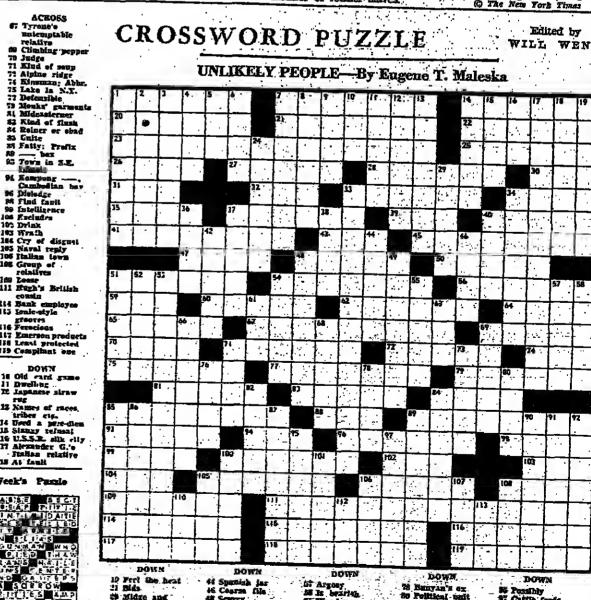

. The reluciance of the nation to reward her with a pension or indeed to pay her any respect tells us something about her America. She had always been too different, a woman determined to go her own way in a man's world. An America that extols the free weman should rediscover Mary Lincoln

VOCAL SUPPORT—Canadian fans in Moscow cheer after the winning goal was scored against the Soviet team.

For Canada, Bedlam; For Russia, Complaints

MOSCOW, Sept. 29.-The sound started up by the roof of V. I. Lenin Arena and washed down over rows of 3,000 Canadians toward the scarred ice: "We're number one, we're number one." Team Canada's captain, Fhil Esposito, jammed two fingers in the air in a victory sign and Rod Gilbert heaved one of his padded gloves

Paul Henderson said "Unbelievable, unbelievable" as he described his feeling after scoring the winning goal against the Soviet national team. The goal, with 34 seconds left, gave the Canadians a come-from-behind 6-5 victory in the final game of the eight-game series, and an overall record of 4-3-1.

Coach is Pleased

Coach Harry Sinden said the victory had wiped out the disgrace of losing two of the first four sames in Canada. One-goal victories in each of the last three games amounted to victory "more for our players than our style," he said. "I'm happy particularly for the National Hockey League players unjustly criticized and called a disgrace to their country." But Soviet sports writers disagreed today, insisting that the myth of the Canadian pros' invincibility has been destroyed." The Soviet press accused the Canadians of "crudity." "foul play," "hooliganism" and "unethical pleying."

A Sport Too Pure to Last

By Leonard Shapiro

HAVERFORD, Pa., Sept. 39 (WP) .- Haverford College, founded by Quakers to stress a rigorous academic program, has managed to field a football team since 1879, with an occasional lapse during time of war, depression or very long losing streaks.

Now it seems that nothing more than a bit of apathy and a heap of freskish bad luck has forced the school to cancel this season's eight-game sched-

That decision will hardly shake the foundations of collegists football, but there is a reason to lament the demise-temporary or otherwise-of football at Haverford College.

this fall, when only 12 of an expected 30 veterans from last year's 2-6 team reported for practice.

Ten of the no-shows took leaves of absence from the campus off Philadelphia's Main Line. Eight more decided that football did not fit into their life styles-many had been hurt the year before and did not relish another season of pain, Actually, 17 showed up for the start of fall practice, including five freshmen. In previous years, Swan said, at least 20 freshmen usually came out, and many played regularly. This year, of 344 freshmen admitted the all-male 750-student school, only 10 had played high school football.

Nevertheless, the 17 recruited seven of the largest bodies they could find in a lunch line for emergency duty. But it never worked out. These players were injured in a strimmage against Cheyney State, and, on Sept. 13, Swan "Somebody was going to get badly hurt," Swan said, "This way, they may be hurt inside, hut at least they come out of it with some dignity." The players are depressed by the situation. Although Swan insists there is a good chance the sport will make a comeback next year, they are not so sure. "A lot of people here were very happy to see the end of football," said Mike Davis, a junior defensive back and one of seven blacks on the team. This is a Quaker school, and there's a bad attitude toward anything involving violence.

FIRST-ROUND LEADERS

By Gordon S. White Jr. NEW YORK, Sept. 29 (NYT). -Seven Ivy League football teams open their season tonight and tomorrow. As the last major college teams to begin the 1973 campaign, Brown, which plays Rhode Island, got a week's start on Ivy colleagues and lost to Holy Cross last Saturday. Pennsylvania began by playing Lafayette tonight in Penn's first night game.

Yale will be interesting to watch because coach Carmen Cozza has decided to go with the wishbone offense. Yale's first test will be with Connecticut in the Yale Bowl. Dartmouth plays New Hampshire, Cornell meets Colgate, Harvard plays Massachinsetts and the original football rivals-Princeton and Rutgersplay at Princeton.

Columbia will open its season against Fordham, marking the first time a pair of New York teems have met since 1953 when Fordbam trounced New York University, 45-0.

Columbia, given a good chance at the league title, will probably be looking ahead to Princeton next week when the Lions and Tigers play the first game in the 100th anniversary season of the Ivy League. Thus, the 1972 sesson is in full

"The McGovern team is behind by 28 points in the polls and the Nixou team seems to be running of will. This is particularly interesting because Nixon has not even been in the ball game. He's been sititing on the beoch and sending in plays to his assistants. This has enraged the McGovern team who claim they came to olky Nixoo and oot his flunkies. But Nixon has said it is unprofessional for someone in his position to go out on the field and mix it up with the McGovern rabble.

"In the first quarter, the Mc-Govern team got off to a bad start when McGovern's star running back, Tom Eagletoo, fumbled the ball. McGovern backed Eagleton in the fumble, but B few minutes later sub-stituted Sarge Shriver in the backfield and sent Eagleton to the locker room.

"This caused great consternation on the team and they were penalized one month for unsportsmanlike credibility.

"Another thing that caused the McGovern team to lose yardage was that, although McGovern is the quarterback, everyooe oo the team was calling a different play. "When McGovern would call for a pass. Shriver would run with "The McGovern team was selected to play in the White House Bowl because of their new brand of football. But as we have seen during the first half, they are playing the same style of football as previous teams without, I might add, much suc-

"There has been a great deal of recrimination about this contest. The McGovern team claims the Nixon team bugged the Mc-Govern locker room and stole the McGovern game plan.

"Nixon had one of his assistant coaches look into these charges what he called the most thorough investigation in football history.' The assistant coach concluded no one on the Nixon team had anything to do with the bugging of the locker room and was appalled that the Mc-Govern team would make an issue of it.

"The McGovern team also has cinimed that one of the reasons It hasn't played well is the lack of money. Their helmets are dented, their shoulder pads are torn and a few of the players have no shoes. They maintain every time the Nixoo team calls a time out, the water boy, Maurice Stans, brings out another bucket of money on the field.

"Mooey does seem to be a problem in this game, but that's only part of it. Let's face it, folks, George McGovern is no Joe Namath. His plays have been unimaginative, his ball handling suspect and as far as the fans are concerned his passes have not been oo target.

"The Nixon team with its buge lead is playing it sale, using up the clock with runs down the middle. The name of the game Rs far as Nixoo is concerned is defeose.

"And that about summarizes the first half. The teams have now come back oo the field for the second half.

"There is McGovern and Shriver screaming at Nixon to get off the bench, But Nixon is ignoring them and instructing Spiro Agnew where to kick the ball."

When Being a Rubinstein Is a Handicap

By William Glover NEW YORK (AP).—Art repeats life, sort of, for John Rubinstein, 25. His father is the planist Artur. In John's first Broadway show, the frizzyhaired actor portrays a son of Charlemagne, the great Holy Roman Emperor. To stretch the parellel a bit further, neither son turned out just as father intended. A pattern that John, a most happy chap, finds mildly amusing, though "They've known always this is what I really wanted," he says "though I don't think they've got it quite straight. They still always take my music more seriously than my theater. That's for them, not because they think I do it better, but for their image of me, it fits better."

And, he cheerfully relates, he did oot expect to be picked for the title role in the $500,000 musical "Pippin," which opened a few nights ago in Washington and is scheduled to arrive at the Imperial Theatre in New York on Oct. 23.

The plot concerns the various life styles. purportedly tried back in the 9th century by Charlemague's son, Pippin or Pepin.
You can look him up in the records, which John did, "and I'm damned if I could find mything about him other than he became

The Schoolboy

John Rubinstein has been performing on TV, screeo and oo hinterland boards ever since be was a schoolboy. He has played everything from Maid Marian in "Robin Hood" ("I had a good soprano voice") to Macbeth himself at age 13.

Being the soo of R famous man, John obliquely concedes, can be R career handl-cap which he has sedulously combetted. "If someone comes op and says 'Tve always admired your father' and so on, I go right along. But in other circumstances, I turn off. No doors were ever opened because of him. That I fought."

John began taking piano lessons at 4, a path previously followed by his older sisters and brother, Eva, Paul and Alina. "I'm sure my father was disappointed." says the soo of the collective results. "He's R very ambitious man. He likes things to take place the way he wants them to take place. He also has a certain amount of common sense, and be's a musician. If he hears his kids playing in an unmusical way, that's enough for him."

The older children dropped out fairly sooo "but my younger sister and I had a musical gift of some kind. Father never taught us, but every now and then he'd make us play and comment. But we were scared to death always to play for him because he'd suddenly become very pro-fessional in his attitude. Never just father and his sweet kids, always how's the Mozart-what about that passage'."

The adolescent years, nevertheless, were filled with dinnertime recitals for friends who happened to drop by—"like Stravinsky, Milhaud and Poulenc." And grand tours of Europe each summer.

Turning Point

A big turning point came at age 8, when the family moved from his native Los Angeles to be in the concert world of New York. John entered a private school that bad B remarkable drama teacher. He also discovered Broadway show music.

"Instead of practicing my Mendelssohn, I was figuring out Porter or Rodgers. They really took me over. I was still a little behind, though, in my musical education, because I wasn't into Elvis Presley, boogle-woogle or early rock'n'roll." Since then he's made a movie with Presley.

In his senior year, at another prestigious prep school, John uncovered a knack for composing, wrote the annual class show with a schoolmate and his father attended. "Hc'd already expressed disapproval," says John. "Not of a strait-laced nature, but sort of a personal offense that I slighting his tradition. It wasn't that he didn't like popular music-Gershwin and Porter were his friends-but it was me ioing something on the sly.

"He thought I had a gift to be a symphony conductor. That's what he really wanted me to be. Yes, I liked the ides. It was remarkic. He said I could. I believed him.

"But the actual thing of going to 3 con-servatory was something else. I'd also hung around musicians all my life and they have to be crasy, practically. At that stage of life, the thought of walking could do that already. But don't send me to a conservatory.

"And I'd found out at school that I didn't dislike all the work that was involved in acting. There wasn't one aspect of theater I didn't like whereas in music it was only the result of music I was interest-ed in—and still am."

Composing

His main interest remains composing. "I would never want to give up writing music," he says. He has done scores for several films and has another currently in His musical taste runs on traditional lines. Electronic and other experimental forms are admired for technical brilliance "but harmony-less sound expresses to me only a certain negativity; it's threatening." Which leads to Rubinstein's outlook on life. "I don't know what it is. I talk about it with other people a lot. I've been very happy. I always have been. I find things that are beautiful and funny always, even in things which other people can't stand.

Almost anything disease death and war.

Every now and then, it takes the shape to other people that I'm a guy who doesn't care. It's quite the opposite. It's a trust that nothing can go wrong. It's almost a

As a person who has experienced both sides of the issue, Chris-tine Jorgensen said she didn's understand the women's liberation movement. Discussing the subject with a group of students at the University of Minnesota at Duluth, Miss Jorgensen, who underwent a sex-change operation in Denmark in 1952, said, "I don't know very many women who aren't liberated" Men need liberation, too, said Miss Jorgensen.
